REFUSE COMMON PERMIT FOR CARBARN TRIO RALLY

Use of the Parkman Bandstand on the Common for a public rally in behalf of the condemned carbarn slayers was refused by city authorities a second time today when Mayor Nichols turned down a request by Frank Manning, secretary of the clemency committee, notifying him that other parties had previously engaged the bandstand for tomorrow afternoon. Acting Mayor Keene on Saturday denied the committee a permit for use of the bandstand on Sunday.

YESTERDAY GABRIEL D'ANNUNZIO published a self-analysis entitled "Way I Face the Future." He says: "They've bewitched by the divine spirit firing my soul. When this sublime force fills me my face flashes with love, and I am transformed into an object of admiration, I beckon to women and they come to me."

JAPAN, OF COURSE, does not intend to fight the United States. The Japanese are intelligent, but there is a difference between not intending and not being ABLE.

MARVELOUSLY UGLY, completely bald, physically feeble, apiritually a giant, it is pleasant to know that D'Annunzio is happy in old age, and that with genius, as with the common man, there is no fool like an old fool.

JAMES T. SIMPSON of Chicago, head of the Marshall Field Company, sailing for Europe, on Saturday, was cheerful about American business conditions. Nothing short of a National catastrophe could affect "our unusually sound and solid prosperity."

JOHN H. HAMMOND, JR., SECRETLY WED

NOTED FINANCIER'S SON MARRIED YEAR AGO TO GLOUCESTER DIVORCEE

John Hays Hammond, Jr., of Gloucester, world famous inventor and son of an equally famous father, has been married for a year, it was learned today.

The electrical research wizard, whose brain gave birth to the radio-controlled torpedo and many other inventions, was secretly married to Mrs. Irene E. Pelton Reynolds, former wife of a Gloucester banker.

When questioned by a reporter, a spokesman for the Hammond family refused to comment on the wedding, but refused to go into details.

From other sources it was learned that the bride did not prove acceptable to the family, her husband and that she was not resolved with open sense by North Shore and Washington society.

The bridegroom is said to be in Europe, at the present time, while his wife is reported to be in New York.

Mrs. Hammond, Jr., was originally Miss Irene E. Pelton, daughter of the late Archibald Pelton and Emma Myers Pelton, her father having been a designer and builder of racing yachts in Gloucester.

According to Frederick Reynolds, a Gloucester banker, she was married in London.

DEATH TRIO ATTORNEY WINS IN FIGHT FOR NEW COURT HEARING

A dramatic eleventh-hour attempt to forestall the electrocution of John J. Devereaux, Edward J. Keimlein and John J. McLaughlin, condemned to death for the Waltham carbarn slaying, succeeded today when a legal manoeuvre in behalf of the trio postponed the execution until Thursday morning or later.

A hearing on a habeas corpus motion brought by Attorney Francis A. Juggins will be held at 9 a. m. Wednesday in the Massachusetts Supreme Court, according to information received by Warden William Hendry of State Prison.

The doomed youths may be permitted to leave their death cells at Charlestown to be present at the Supreme Court proceedings.

The change in the date of the long fight to save them came with startling suddenness at the last flame of hope for the condemned men was flickering and dying out.

Warden Hendry, with whom rested the duty of fixing the exact day and hour for carrying out the execution of death this week, was being

MOTHER A "GOOD SPOUT."
The memory of her mother touched her poignantly and she added: "Poor mother—she was such a dear, good spout."

Woman is plenty, now, a young woman of intelligence, poise and charm. For the first time, she reveals, she emotions that buoyed her during those dark hours when the "dear, good spout" that was her mother, lay white and still in the bed.

Urged, time after time, to tell her story, Charlotte always shrunk from the publicity. But now, she said, the truth may do some good.

The Grand Jury never asked her anything about the murder, so far as she could "know," Charlotte said.

"Mrs. Hall knew everything about the murder," Dr. Hall said. "Mrs. Mills declared. She then went on to the effect of an incident related to her by her mother when the latter was in a hospital. Dr. Hall at that time threatened, in the presence of his wife, to kill himself. If Mrs. Mills had not said the same thing, Mrs. Mills said, Mrs. Hall caught Dr. Hall writing a 'love hymn' to her mother."

Charlotte said she understood from her mother, that "Dr. Hall had asked his wife to please let him

'MISSING FACE' GREATEST REWARD EDUCATORS

The greatest movie contest ever conducted by a New England newspaper, the richest in rewards, the most enjoyable in its features, will be inaugurated by the Boston Evening American one week from today.

Endorsed by educators, approved by prominent State officials, promoted by scores of picture theatres of the better class, the Greater Movie Season Contest will last only 20 days.

At its close, some participant will be invited to choose a friend and go on a five-day tour of the Mediterranean, on board the Royal Mail steamship "Orea," with all expenses paid. The value of this prize is at least $2,000.

A second prize winner will be presented with $100 in gold. There will be substantial cash prizes for several others. Some are going to get a Franklin rifle set, someone else a set of 50 Croquet & Dunslop popular novels.

ROUND THE WORLD TRIP.

A score or more who take part in the contest through the Evening American will be rewarded with prizes to their favorite picture theatres, names good for two persons and for one year.

But this is not all. Judges to be named by the Managing Editor of this newspaper will designate the best 25 sets of answers which are received by the Boston Evening American at the close of the contest and the best 25 sets of answers will be forwarded to New York and entered in competition for the National Awards with "best sets" from other cities.

First of the National Awards will be a trip for two around the world, on the steamship Delandean of the Red Star Line, a trip occupying 112 days from New York back to New York again.

Second of the National Awards will be two weeks for two persons at the Sequoyia National Exposition in Philadelphia, cultured transportation, meals, all other needed expenses and daily admission to the Exposition free of all cost to the prize-winners.

"SAMPLE" TELLS STORY.

It is going to be a rich contest, and a happy one. Everyone may take part in it. It is not too big to cost any one a penny to take part, either, for if you do not want to buy any copy of the Evening American, or for several extra copies in the case of a family of participants, you may copy the "Sample Picture" as they will appear daily in this newspaper beginning Monday, Aug. 16, and these pictures will be accepted on the same basis as clips from the paper.

Elsewhere in this number of the Evening American you will find a "sample" picture, which tells the story of the contest at a glance.

Every day for 20 consecutive publication-days, beginning on Monday next, the Evening American will print a Contest Picture from which the face of one of the figures will be missing.

These pictures will be illustrations taken from some well known motion picture play.

It will be the task of the contestant to name the star whose face is missing, and to give the title of the picture play from which the illustration is taken.

PASSES FOR A YEAR.

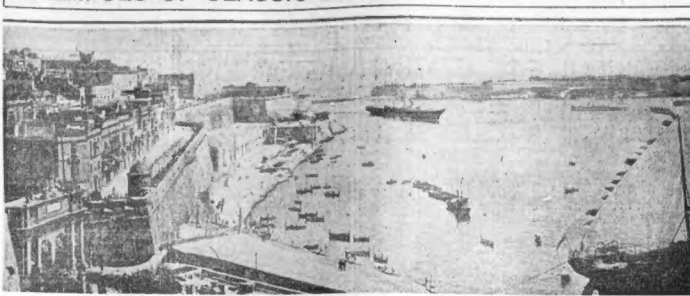

And that will be all there is to the contest except that each participant must also write a brief letter—not more than 100 words—on "Why I Like the Movies."

Remember that you are to send nothing in before the close of the contest. That is, send nothing in before Contest Picture No. 20 has been printed. Save all the pictures and send them in as one set of answers at the close of the contest.

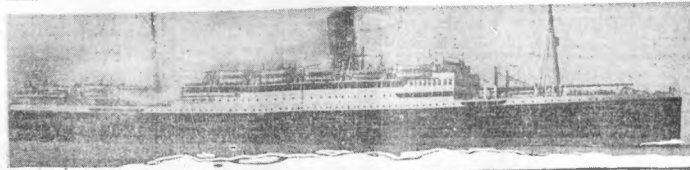

The National Greater Movie Week Contest, in which several prominent newspapers are taking part, the Boston Evening American the only one in this section of the country was conceived not only for the purpose of directing attention to the Greater Movie Season now beginning, but also by way of celebrating the 25th birthday of motion pictures.

Every movie theatre is or should be tremendously interested and all in this part of New England have been invited to cooperate. The Boston Evening American will begin

GLIMPSES OF CLASSIC LANDS FOR MOVIE WINNERS

GREAT BRITAIN'S MEDITERRANEAN

The Royal Mail Steam Packet Company's S. S. Orea leaves New York on February 26, 1927, and is scheduled to return on May 6 following, making 69 days of pleasurable voyaging for the fortunate winner of the "Film Face" contest and his (or her) companion. Stop overs, permitting the travelers to visit points of interest will be made.

will be printed directly under each of the Contest Pictures. Every day or two, you will hear to find, in addition, further clues to identify printed in a frame or "box," immediately below the film upon which you are to write your name and address.

In many respects an "easy" contest, a very easy contest, in which, what with lists of titles, lists of names, and other aids, you will find it no more than a game.

And another, the moderately well known movie fan will find that he for her is almost bound to find the correct answer.

And do not let the "letter" scare you, the letter of not more than 100 words on "Why I Like the Movies," for all that is expected is a sincere and intelligent statement. This is not a search for a new novelist, or a great short-story writer, but an endeavor to find out just why so many persons do like the movies.

In writing the letter, therefore, the best thing you can do will be to "be yourself."

One short week to wait for Contest Picture No. 1. Then, three weeks and two days of contest "work." And then—

Well, then someone who reads these lines today will be getting ready for a tour of the Mediterranean, someone else will be packing for the big show at Philadelphia, and another someone else will be signing on the dotted line for the Evening American's Five Hundred Dollars.

Not to mention all the other prizes and to say nothing at all about the "chance" that will be presented in 25 Boston Evening American editions for the trip for two around the world.

With four small children to support, another expected shortly, and without a "friend in the world" to turn to, Mrs. Sidney Aubrey, of No. 71 Quincy street, Springfield, sends an appeal to her missing husband to "come home, and all will be forgiven." Furel attended her funeral when she was buried here today. Prison officials were notified that Mrs. Furel had been a few hours to five. Many formalities and numerous signatures were necessary before Furel could be taken out of prison with a guard.

HISTORIC SCENES IN TOUR FOR MOVIE TEST WINNERS

The Mediterranean cruise for two persons, offered as First Award in the Boston Evening American's Greater Movie Season Contest, will take in all the ports included in the usual and popular standard cruise, and thus will appeal to those who may find in this their first opportunity to enjoy the Mediterranean.

But it will also include many stops heretofore never included in a cruise of this sort, and so will appeal to all who have enjoyed the standard cruise and now would like to voyage again, this time along some of the byways that were highways of the close in days of yore, and to shrines that ruled their world.

TOUCH AT MALTA.
It will be a Voyage of Discovery, back to the days of Zeus and of Apollo, of Theseus and the Minotaur, Paris and Helen, of poets and oracles and sacred games, where, amidst exquisite fragments of "the glory that was Greece," the foundations of our own culture lie.

On Monday, March 14, our seventeenth day out from New York, the Orea touches Malta, a little island filled with reminders of typhoons and the nymph who kept him prisoner, of St. Paul and his shipwreck, of the presence of Malta and their fight against the Turk, and of the program of the contest.

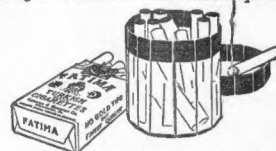

The program above includes visits to Valletta, the new city, which was laid out in 1566, the palace of the Governor and the Cathedral of St. John, containing many memories of Grand Masters and Knights of the Maltese Order, and an excursion to the interior of the island to "Citta Vecchia," the old city, or original capital.

Four days later, we reach beautifully situated Beirut, overlooking the sea. All about are luxuriant groves and lovely suburban gardens, with new-cropped Lebanon in the background.

On Sunday, March 19th, our prize winners reach Palestine, to remain for three memorable days. The program includes an excursion from Haifa to Jerusalem and return. Three days later, the Royal Mail steam packet Company's splendid cruising steamer Orea will reach Egypt, for a stay of five days.

Will you be a passenger on the Orea? Are there in wonderful days to be yours and those of a traveling companion of your own selection? The answer is up to you. The Boston Evening American's Greater Movie Season Contest begins one week from today and this Tour of the Mediterranean for two will be the first prize. It MUST be won by some Evening American contestant.

WOMAN OUT TO BEAT POMERENE

Columbus, O., Aug. 9 (A.P.)—Outstanding in Ohio's primary election tomorrow is the race for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator between Miss Florence E. Allen, judge of the state supreme court, and former Senator Alben W. Pomerene, one of the government prosecutors in the old case.

The Republican gubernatorial nomination with twelve candidates is a close competition for voter interest.

The dominant issue has been prohibition, with Miss Allen favoring the endorsement of the Anti-Saloon League, the "wet" advocates' victory, and the League of Nations.

Mr. Pomerene's chief opposition in addition to the dry organization is that of organized labor, particularly the National Brotherhood, who opposed him for election four years ago.

In the Republican Senatorial contest, Senator Frank B. Willis is opposed by seven candidates. The opposition liberal vote of the party is expected to be thrown against former C. H. Hildbrand, Wilmington, former Congressman and former secretary of state.

FASCIST LEADER SLAIN IN BATTLE AT TURIN

Turin, Italy, Aug. 9 (A.P.)—Angelo Brandi, political secretary of the local Fascist organization, was killed and a Fascist politician injured in a revolver fight today between a group of Fascists and a band of unknown men who had refused to accede to a demand that they identify themselves.

ALL N. Y. POLICE WAR ON SLAYERS

New York, Aug. 9 (U.N.B.)—Police Commissioner McLaughlin set the entire police department at work today to "check the slaughter of members of the forces." His action followed the death of Patrolman Frank J. Murphy of Brooklyn, who was shot three times by gunmen when he tried to halt a stolen automobile in which they were riding.

Murphy was the fifth policeman murdered this year and the second within forty-eight hours.

"Every man on our force of 10,000 will work eagerly and willingly day and night to apprehend anyone guilty of assaulting a fellow policeman," Commissioner McLaughlin said. "The entire energy and ability of the force are being concentrated in this assaulting and killing of policemen."

MAX COPEN WILL RUN ON COOLIDGE PLATFORM

Max W. Copen, candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress against Congressman Underhill, in the Sixth District, has announced his platform as follows:

"I shall support the policies of President Coolidge. I believe that active practices of law for twenty-four years and my support of the Republican party and the United States during that period gives me sufficient experience for my work in Congress."

Clara Bow to Star in Elinor Glyn's "It"

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS, Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Elinor Glyn's definition of "it" is to be explained on the screen in a motion picture made by Famous Players-Lasky, under her own personal supervision. Ever since the day Madame Glyn coined this phrase many press agencies have borrowed it as descriptive of their particular client.

She, however, has steadfastly denied that these people possessed the quality described in the brief word.

Clara Bow

"It" is a novel written by Madame Glyn, will be produced with Clara Bow in the leading female role. This really means more than the above paragraph indicates. It means that B. F. Schullberg has signed Madame Glyn on a long term contract to bring her own stories to the screen and to supervise them without interference.

Madame Glyn wrote "It" especially for Clara Bow, to which it will be published serially at a later date.

Her popularity throughout the country and her knowledge of motion pictures in general make it easy to see that in print that M. F. Schullberg, a good business man.

STUART HOLMES is going to have a chance to play a part without being the wicked villain. Mickey Neilan has engaged him to play the role of an actor, kindly disposed and friendly to all the world.

By this you will see that Mr. Holms is one of the important roles in "Everybody's Acting," the next Neilan picture, and by the way, if Mickey keeps adding to the cast they won't be getting any more of other side, Rudy just couldn't seem to get the name of someone who has been added to the Neilan roster.

THE CHOOSING OF MARY MAGDALENE after all will not be entirely up to Cecil De Mille. The responsibility, De Mille admits, is the great and so he has called his old friends, Jesse Lasky and Sam Goldwyn, to his aid.

He was dining at the home of Jesse Lasky the other night when all of the tests taken, and after looking at them again he admitted his inability to make a decision he asked Mr. and Mrs. Lasky, Sam Goldwyn and Jesse MacPherson to form an advisory committee and be agreed to abide by their decision.

And they say in the movie the producers are all at each other's throats.

It looks to me as if the dove of peace is descending on Hollywood.

RUDOLPH VALENTINO IS SAILING for Europe, August 11. When he was in New York he had no intention of crossing the pond this Summer as he expected to return to Hollywood as soon as he had begun work on "Celine," his next picture.

But with "Son of the Sheik" being released on the other side, Rudy just couldn't resist the impulse to take the Ben Hur and get over in London about the time it is shown there.

Natasha Rambova, the former Mrs. Valentino, is in Paris, and although no one believes they will ever see each other, you never can tell in this vale of tears what is apt to happen. As for Pola Negri, she hasn't said what she thought about Rudy traveling abroad at this time.

ALL THE GLORY OF "We're in the Navy Now" is not to belong to Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton, the two seasoned trouper who always manage to get a good break.

Richard Arlen has been signed as the juvenile lead and if he is half what they claim for him both, Nelly and Raymond will have to look to their laurels.

GERTRUDE OLMSTEAD and her husband, Robert Leonard, will be separated. Now, don't get excited. I mean only separated by the distance between Culver City and Universal City.

Gertrude, who seems to be increasing in favor with the fans all the time and who everybody admits has a future, has been borrowed by Reginald Denham as his leading lady in "The Cheerful Traveler."

NORMA TALMADGE DECIDED at the eleventh hour yesterday to go East with her husband, Joseph Schenck.

"I had thought at first I would stay in California and avoid the hot weather," she said, "but my husband is arriving in New York from Paris in about two weeks and I want to meet her."

The Sun of Montmartre, which will be Norma's last for First National, does not go into production for three weeks, so she will have time to meet the boat and spend a few days with Constance, who has had a marvelous time abroad.

According to clippings and letters, Connie and the new husband, Captain Alister Macdonald, have been much entertained both in Paris and London.

We'll Be Angelic in Few Years, Says Lodge

Oxford, Eng., Aug. 9 (A.P.)—A prophecy that with the present generation's advances will make revolutionary discoveries in the realm of the spiritual was made by Sir Oliver Lodge in an address before the Spiritualist Association.

"If I had to make a guess," he said, "I would say that within a generation, through the nineteenth century and up to the present, we have been dealing chiefly with a material world, there is before us a discovery of a spiritual world.

"Before this association meets again in Oxford, our view of the universe will be revolutionized more than ever, and this time beyond all the previous scope. We shall rise to become masters of a higher order, and once we have stepped over the threshold, the grave, the gate of death, there is no end to the ascent."

THE HORLICKS
BURNING WITH THE desire TO GIVE, and they are prepared to SACRIFICE EVERYTHING in order TO GIVE
WHAT THEY WANT.
This, to a young girl,
is a very serious thing.
To an INTELLIGENT woman
it is NOT SO GOOD.
For she would want TO GIVE
ALL, and she would be as disconcerting as those who want TO GIVE ALL, and she and the girl are pretty THE SAME.
But so TRUE? philanthropist
mustn't expect to "HANDLE"

MEDBURY SAYS

By John P. Medbury

LOTS of men, women and children have installed cash registers in their homes and are now doing their housework on credit.

IT costs a man $1.00 to get a cash register and 10 cents to get the furniture dented.

ONE husband is so stingy that he won't even wash the dishes unless she gets her money in advance.

THE old boy was smart. He was able to open an account with his wife and she told him she didn't know him well enough to give.

SHE said she'd have to be married to him ten years before she'd do his housework on deferred pay.

THE last husband she had ran up a bill of $100 on her.

SHE'S a good wife, but she won't touch a broom now unless she gets a dividend.

HER husband is a miser and she has a miser put on the carpet and a miser put on the carpet and a miser put on the carpet.

DAILY SHORT STORY

PETER PUTS ONE OVER

By Louis Arthur Cunningham

THIS hard-working staff of Instenby & Department Store was in a state of near-banishment. Word had spread that there would be no annual bonus, not even a kind word from that old curmudgeon, Peter Instenby, who controlled the amount of their pay checks.

Mean! It was the quintessence of stinginess. The store celebrated the twentieth anniversary of its founding on the day the bonus was to be declared. Everbody from the monkey food pats who ran the elevator to the spin-vinyl floorwalker, who ran the fashions department, had looked forward eagerly to the big day, and worked hard that the bonus might be greater. There were aching arms, tired backs and weary heads behind the busy counters of Instenby's and there would be no reward.

The ordinary paychecks were issued in the morning. They were received with sulk and sneers.

"I don't think he would have had them printed on fancy paper, at least," said Nora, one of the department store girls who had been a new arrival in Instenby's that morning. She was a big, dark-haired, serious person, with an immense black beard and long hair. His name was Klockey, and his political and social opinions were lurid.

Klockey had no chance of benefit by the bonus, but this did not prevent him from being the most outraged of all the hundreds who suffered from Peter Instenby's meanness.

A few held on to a last faint hope. Some said the bonus would come at Christmas, others were in favor of waiting the game on general principle, and a general apoplexy began when Peter Instenby's meanness was in the direction of the front-end of the store. Behind which old Peter counted his shekels when he had finished counting his golf score.

After closing time an indignation meeting, very impromptu and very rapid, centered around the Negro counter. Klockey was in the middle of it, trying in vain to pour an eloquent set of the large ideas of not standing up beside a pink display and started to harangue.

"Peace on earth," he began, to be howled down by everyone, including the sporting goods clerk and the lady who sobbed in the children's shop.

"Good will to men," he continued, suddenly under the impression that it was Christmas. He begged for silence and got it chiefly because everyone was weary of shouting.

"We've been treated meanly," Klockey began, "and we're not named of having claimed our due."

Without the ancient formality of a knock, he opened the door and walked into Peter Instenby's sanctum where none save the highest dared enter.

Bravely they waited. From within came sounds of a terrible struggle and the hoarse crash of a falling body. They hurried about the door.

Klockey nudged out. His face was frozen to an expression of horror, his beard grotesquely twisted. "I've added him," he gasped.

"Second Peter Instenby?"

"Well," said the murderer, plucking curtly at his beard, "well, aren't you glad? You hated him for his meanness. You called him everything that was low. I'm glad he's gone."

An elevator boy . . . one of the first to follow the revolt . . . "We're not a good enough red chap, shall we? I'm glad he's gone. I'll tell him in his den." Volunteered Klockey, who carried as the choice a vacuum cleaner. Quiet settled on the mob. "I'll confront him and tell him we are not named of having claimed our due."
